National Severe Weather Warning Service

Chief Forecasters Assessment
An active, showery frontal zone will move across Wales during the early hours of Friday, clearing during Friday morning. This feature is expected to be relatively narrow with associated rainfall only lasting two or three hours at most.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Warning of Rain

Valid from 03:00 on Fri, 08th Jan 2016 until 09:00 on Fri, 08th Jan 2016

Rain, heavy at times, will affect parts of Wales early on Friday. Locally 10 to 20 mm of rain is likely to fall, and some snow is also likely over higher mountains. With the ground already being saturated please be aware of the risk of local flooding and possible disruption to transport. Some icy patches may also form on untreated surfaces by Friday morning as skies clear and temperatures fall following this rain.
